GENTLEMEN.

GENTLEMEN.

A LTHOUHH my fex and fituation may have kept me from a personal acquintance with you, and indeed have made it doubtful whether you have ever heard of my name, yet 1 am not wholly unacquanted with your charracters: to celebrate which is not my present province: The public voice, through which channel i have received my information, has, I hope done ou justice m setting those, in fo fair a point of light as they now stand; and (I ask pardon of the fashionable part, of my fex) statery I since ely despire. You gentlemen have it very much in your power to form the principles create the manners and stamp an indelible complexion on the gene at character of this district. The important consequences of performing this task well, muy probably continue to a very distant period. Go on gent emen to make every succeeding year resides shoon or on the past, your addions continue ever to approve them, selves to the virtuous mind; and when your administration epids (for it must end) may it receive the sinal approbation of heaven eath and -your-selves. As to the following visionary suggestions, I have nothing to say: if the sent uners they converted the production of the sent and allow of the want of the want on the want on the want on the want of the want of the want allows of an ungoverned immagination. A VAJINT ye critics! nor your art abuse;
But spare the softness of a female muse;
Through trads of prose your envious rout pursue;
This puny estay was not made for you:
Ye ne'ercan live on such a phantom heme,
For empty, like yourfelves, tip but a dream.
The clock structs 12; & from his golden throne,
The sun, in full meridian grandeur stone;
O er shadeless feids the light wing d zephyrs flew,
And not a vapour tinged th' ethereal blue.
The dwith the spindles unharmonious founds,
And the thread-forming wheel's repeated rounds,
Down the blank garden's untrod wasks Tsray'd,
While iound me, coolly ruffling breezes payd's
For winter yet, shook oft his nitrous wing,
To check the virgin-wantonness of spring;
No flowret dar d unveil her filver gem,
Nor genial juices swell'd the purple stem;
No peeping rose-bud cheer'd the gardners toil,
And embrio-pinks lay brooding in the foil.
There I upon a gently-swelling bed,
Of-grateful cammonile reclind my head;
From whose prest foliage, breathing fragrant rose,
Which sim, me see some the seed of the service.

- There I upon a gently-twelling bed.
 Of grateful cammomile reclind my head;
 I from whose pred foliage, breathing fragrant rofe,
 Which tunk my fends foon in toft repue.

 Methought an airy-foored fylph drew near,
 And gently flooping, whilefe'd in my ear,
 Antle my Sophia; flumb' ing female rife;
 For Arril's court-day-morning eilds the fk ics;
 Heav'n's wand'ring lamps, have fhone their nightly
 round,
 And ceafe to twinkle in their azure ground;
 Arife, and fkiff with me o're fairy meads,
 fweet fylvan feenes, and vifionary fhades;
 Or, wing'd fublime rife and traverie with me,
 The various rezuons of air, earth, and fea.
 She faid: we mounted, light as vernal gales,
 When Flora breathes her fragrance o er the vales;
 With wide fireach'd wing, cleft the unfeeling air;
 And fudden fwept our wettern hemeiphe e,
 From where the' Atlah ic wafhes Georgia's fhore.
 To where broad Erie's mid-land furges roar:
 Rectofs-d Ohio's ftream, with flacken'd reins,
 And hover'd oe'r Kentucky's fruitful plains;
 Wedry with flight, we took our flation there,
 On a ftrong column of collected air.
 I flook'd, and foon an infant-town defery'd;
 Her ftreets, and house's, throgy'd from fide to fide,
 From fide to fide, my curious eye purfu'd,
 And the weil-varied feene with pleature-view'd,
 A motly group of men, this feene difcles'd,
 Of ev'ry colour, age and fex compot'd;

White, black, and mix'd; all hues that intervenes,

White, black, and mix'd; all hues that intervenes, From Arriers black wool'd lons, to red hair d danes. Here hoary age thine s out, and boafts her years; There roly youth, veil'd with a bluth appears; There roly youth, veil'd with a bluth appears; There roly youth, veil'd with a bluth appears; There will a digallant flurs in red; The fullen clown flatks, here, before his fpoufe; There will have been been to the cumb'rous load. The fullen clown flatks, here, before his fpoufe; There will have been been the feeling house; Through ev'ry lane they pour, and ev'ry road; Till the fivet ground beneath the cumb'rous load. Mark yonder blund'ring rake, with empty skull, By nature made impenetrably dull; Or here, and there, a fived of stragling fense, Mix'd with lewd jets, or rude impertinence: He freely calls, and quastis bowl after bowl, Till mixtures foul, immeric his very foul! Then as occasion, time, or grogg invites, Sings, laught, or dances; bullies, kwasa, ordghts. Behold the parforn—babling muse for bear, That tharacter's too facred for a fiver; Leave that to the half-heliconean breed, Who can be witty only on the creed; Old Dryden's bastard brood, who dares dispense, His obscene rallaries, without his senie.

Here too-but by variety oppressed, Here too-but by variety oppressed, Here too-but by variety oppressed, Decciption tries; fancy must paint the rest: A blended, moties mais of things, and themes; All factions, feets, tongues, partizans and names, That time, inpast or present ever und:
